

MULBERRY

Morus nigra

Native to western Asia, the black mulberry has been in cultivation in Europe since pre-Roman times. Trees are self-fertile with large and juicy fruit. Flavor has a refreshing tart/sweet balance reminiscent of grapefruit. Fruit ripens in late summer and is great eaten fresh, dried, in baking, or for winemaking.

ILLINOIS EVERBEARING	Large, glossy, nearly seedless fruit. Black when fully ripe. Pleasant mix of tart and sweet, similar to blackberries, but without the seeds. Tree is slender and fast growing. Fruits hold well on tree.
PAKISTAN	Large, firm, sweet fruit to 4" long colored red to black ripens over six weeks. Vigorous, drought tolerant variety.
TEAS WEEPING	Fast growing, heat loving small tree (to 20' x 20') with graceful weeping form and delicious, blackberry-like fruit. Zones 3-9.
